One More Thing

Vivian Wong is a former financial PR and corporate communications professional. Originally from Hong Kong, she moved to Ireland in 2017, where she combined her 20+ years of experience in creative industries, project management, and communications to build a new venture from scratch.

In 2021, Vivian founded One More Thing (OMT) – a sustainable lifestyle brand that transforms preserved flowers into timeless floral art. What started as a pandemic project has since become a multi-award-nominated business known for its innovative Everblooms, preserved floral arrangements that require no water or maintenance and last for years.

OMT has established a strong retail presence across Ireland, with repeated pop-ups in Brown Thomas and Kildare Village, where it set a record for most pop-ups by an emerging Irish brand. The business has also expanded into hospitality décor, supplying top-tier hotels and luxury venues with bespoke floral installations. In 2024, OMT completed its first overseas hotel project in Brussels and began exporting to the UK and Europe.

Vivian's journey as an immigrant entrepreneur has gained widespread media attention. She has been featured on the cover of Life Magazine, and in numerous national publications celebrating her professional achievements, creative flair, and commitment to sustainability. Her distinctive interior style and creative vision also earned her a finalist spot on RTÉ's Home of the Year 2025, where her home was praised for its personal storytelling and artful design.

Vivian is passionate about creating meaningful, design-led experiences that celebrate sustainability without compromising on luxury. From immersive retail activations to partnerships with leading hospitality groups, she continues to reimagine how preserved florals can enhance spaces and gifting moments across the globe.
